

Waldnych/Walden Berg 1948

This picture was taken on Chaim's 18th birthday.
The boys in the picture are Chaim Sepal (on the left)
and his best friend Kuba (Yacob) Bleiberg.

Kuba Bleiberg went to Israel and he still lives
there.

Israel, 1950

Chaim (Imek) Segal just before being recruited to the Israeli Army.

1950

Chaim Segal newly recruited to Israeli Army. It was called in Hebrew "Tzava Hagana le Israel" (Partisan Army of Israel).

On this photo Chaim is about 21 years old.

1950

On this picture is Chaim Segal after being newly recruited to Israeli Army.

Israel, 1951

Chaim Segal (the first from the left) and his two army friends.

Second from the left is Yankl Grinberg whom I met in Dabrowa and then they joined again in the army. ^(Yankl) He was in the air base.

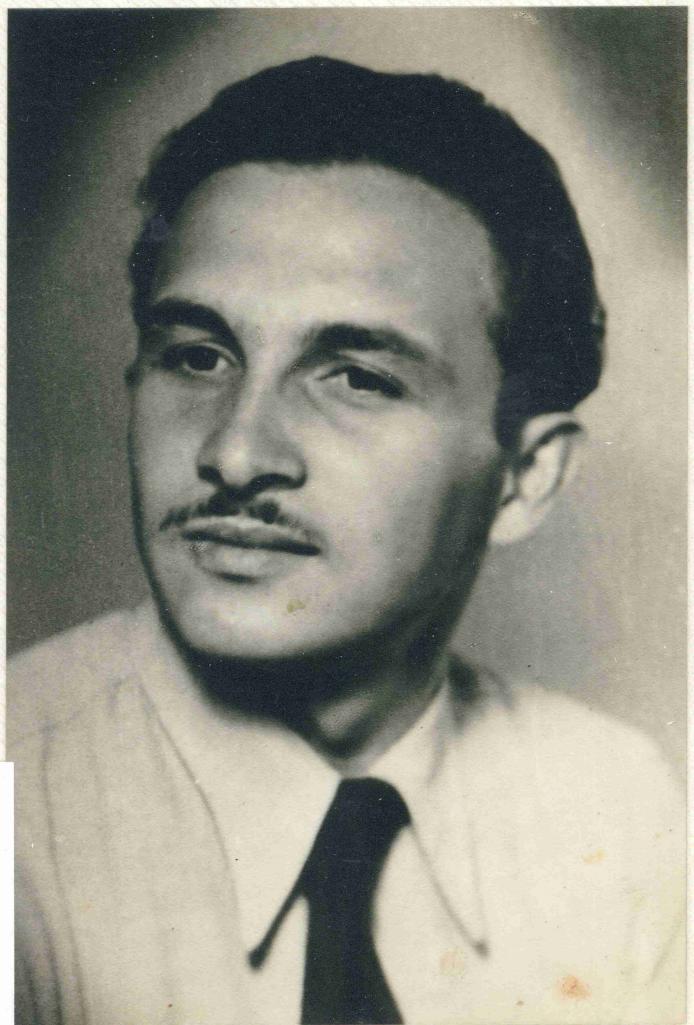

Third young man is Joshua (Yoshua) Stern, former neighbor from Dabrowa. In 1949 Yoshua and I met across the border together and went to Czechoslovakia. Yoshua was stationed in the mechanic base.

Chaim was in the transport base in the army.

Watcruyck, circa 1951

Photo of our father,
Bernard Segal. Chaim received this photo when he was already in Israeli Army.

Herzlia, Israel, 1953

This is Chaim Segal after finishing the service in the Israeli Army. He is 24 years old in this picture.

Borystaw, 1979

This photo was taken during survivors' visit to Borystaw in the summer of 1979. The monument symbolizing crematorium chimney was the only structure still standing behind the slaughterhouse where about ten thousand Jewish people were murdered. Seven huge concrete slabs covering the mass graves were completely destroyed by the Russian army during their shooting practice. People in the picture are all survivors of the Holocaust. From the left, standing at the monument is Emanuel Szrele, survivor from Mathausen, Chaim's friend from Borystaw. Emanuel's mother and brother were also killed at the slaughterhouse. The second is Chaim Segal, sitting on the ground and crying. The third person is Yehov Bender, survivor from Mathausen. Yehov's family was also killed in Borystaw and some family members were murdered and buried in mass graves behind the slaughterhouse.

Borystaw, 1979

Lighting memorial candles
by the monument behind
the slaughterhouse are Yahov Bender and Chaim Segal.

Borystaw, 1979

Emanuel Szekh, survivor from Mathousen says Kadish (prayer for the dead) for all the people of Borystaw murdered by the Nazis.

Next to Emanuel stands Yahov Bender; leaning against the monument is Chaim Segal. The person on the right is Jewish man who after WWII decided to stay in Borystaw and continue leaving there. He took part in the prayers but I still don't remember his name.